PREFACE

It is with great pleasure that the Institute is bringing out the present edition of the text, Nandikeśakāśikā ascribed to Nandi along with the commentary Tattvaparakāśikā of the legendary saint Upamanyu. The text provides mystical interpretation of the Māheśvarasūtras of Pāṇini's Āṣṭādhyāyī. While the text is quite brief and difficult to understand, the commentary is lucid and easy to comprehend.

The text and the commentary have been published long ago with Telugu and Tamil translations. These are not available now. Also they have been published by the Government Oriental Manuscript Library, Chennai (1950) and by the Vidya Vinodini press, Tanjore (1924).

The present edition by the Institute is mainly based on the GOML edition, in consultation with the Tanjore edition. This edition also carries both the Roman transliteration and English translation of the text and commentary, for the first time.

The publication is made possible by the munificent donation given by Mr.S.Hariharan, in memory of his wife Dr. S. Jayashree. We are deeply indebted to him for the same.

Dr. S. Jayashree, was a faculty member of our Institute, who was interested in different fields of Sanskrit Studies.

She was the first to deviate from the beaten path and to enter into the field of Scientific studies in Sanskrit, in the Institute. She wrote articles in the Journal of Oriental Research, Madras (published by the Institute), related to Earthquakes and Volcanoes and other natural phenomena.

She also carried out the project on Eclipses in Hindu Life and Thought at the Institute. It was later brought out as a book by the Institute. She was also engaged in the project on "Women in the Epics".

The Institute dedicates this publication to Dr. S. Jayashree, who was a personal friend of the staff of the Institute.

This book is the result of the joint efforts of my colleagues Dr. K. S. Balasubramanian and Dr.T.V. Vasudeva, both Deputy Directors of the Institute. They have been ably assisted by the academic staff of the Institute — Mrs. R. Subasri, Mr. V. Ramakrishnan and Mr. S. N. Krishna in proof reading the text.

Our thanks are due to Mrs. M. Srividya of the Institute for type-setting the text and to Mr.B. Ganapathy Subramanian of the Madras Sanskrit College for the lay-out and wrapper designing.

Sri Harish Printers are to be thanked for the neat printing and nice get-up.

INTRODUCTION

Nandī or Nandikeśvara is well known as the chief of the Śivagaṇas. There are many stories about him narrated in Purāṇas. Besides, there is also a Purāṇa in his name as Nandi or Nandikeśvara purāṇa, which according to R. C. Hazra belongs to 6-7 cent. A.D. and is lost now¹. According to legends, he was well versed in music. Many texts on different branches of knowledge like Kāmaśāstra, Āyurveda, Yoga, Jyotiṣa and Vyākaraṇa are ascribed to him². Of these, Abhinayadarpaṇa, a text on music and dance, Netraprakāśikā on Āyurveda and Nandikeśakāśikā on grammar have already been published.

The text, Nandikeśakāśikā (- kārikā) (NK) also known as Nandikeśvarakāśikā or Kāśikāstava or Ādisūtrakāśikā consists of twenty seven verses containing mystical intpretation of the Śivasūtras or the Pratyāhārasūtras of Pāṇini's Āṣṭādhyāyī.

According to the legend, Lord Śiva, in his well-known aspect of Naṭarāja, produced from his hand-drum (ḍhakkā), the sound from which emanated the fourteen principal sūtras starting with अ इ उ ए . This formed the basis of Pāṇini's Āṣṭādhyāyī. These sūtras comprise of the vowels and consonants of Sanskrit language. This is described in the first verse of NK thus:

नृत्तावसाने नटराजराजो ननाद ढक्कां नवपञ्चवारम् ।
उद्धर्तुकामस्सनकादिसिद्धानेतद्विमर्शे शिवसूत्रजालम् ॥

The fact that, Nāgeśa Bhaṭṭa quotes this verse in his well known treatise Laghuśabdenduśekhara, brings to light the authenticity of the text.

Upamanyu, the legendary saint, has written the commentary Tattvavimarśini on NK, . He is said to be the disciple of Dhaumya. According to another version, he is the son of Vyāgrapāda³. The NCC (Vol. II. p. 368-69) lists some stotras authored by him. His *Śivabhaktivilāsa*⁴, deals extensively on the lives of sixty three Tamil Śaiva saints (known as Nāyanmārs).

NK tries to highlight the salient features of Śaiva philosophy, through the interpretation of the fourteen Māheśvara sūtras. While the ślokas or the kārikās by Nandikeśvara are cryptic and difficult to understand, the commentary of Upamanyu is on the other hand lucid and explains the basic metaphysics of Śaiva philosophy. It specially deals with the nature of Lord Śiva, his supremacy as the creator, nature of māyā, the four aspects of speech viz., parā, paśyanti, madhyamā and vaikharī. This text also refers to the five karmendriyas, five jñanendriyas, five principal elements, (pañcabhūtas), five subtle elements (tanmātras), the characteristics of the non-dual self and so on.

NK has been printed with Upamanyu's commentary, Tattvavimarśini also called Ṭikā or Vivaraṇa, with Tamil and Telugu translations⁵. But these publications were brought out more than seven decades ago and are not available for scholars now.

The present edition follows mainly the text with commentary edited by T. Chandrasekharan and published by the Government Oriental Manuscript Library, Chennai (Vol. III, Bulletin of the GOML, Madras, 1950) which is based on two manuscripts, one in Grantha script and the other a paper transcript of the manuscript of TMSSML, Tanjore. Another printed text of NK with commentary, published by Vidya Vinodini press (Tanjore, 1924), has also been consulted.

5. For details see, NCC. IX. p. 332.

Some of the readings given in the footnotes of the GOML edition, are found better than the ones in the main text. After consulting the other edition, we have tried to produce a readable text in Devanāgarī and Roman scripts for the first time. Also the present edition carries an English translation of the Kāśika with the commentary, for the first time.

We are sure that scholars working in the field of Śaivism and Vyākaraṇa would welcome this publication.

1. गुरुकुमारं श्रीशंकरं

Having worshipped the Auspicious (lord Śiva), the preceptor and lord Kumāra (Subrahmanya) who is an exponent of principles of Śaiva philosophy, Nandikeśvara and other devotees of lord Śiva frequently, I comment upon with best of my knowledge, the benevolent work of Nandikeśa, the Kāśikā of the original divine aphorisms, for the benefit of people.

इह खलु सकललोकनायकः परमेश्वरः परमशिवः सनक-सनन्दन caturdaśa sūtrātmakam tattvāmupadideśa ।*

Hereupon Paramaśiva, the lord of the entire universe instructed, under the pretext of sounding the hand-drum, the doctrine of fourteen sūtras, to uplift the listeners viz., Sanaka, Sanandana, Sanatkumāra and others like Nandikeśvara, Patañjali, Vyāghrapāda and Vasiṣṭha.

Following this, those great saints thought thus: “the lord taught the doctrine of fourteen aphorisms to us who remained (with him) for a long period. Nandikeśvara knows the (true) import of the collection of these aphorisms”. They inquired Nandikeśvara, after saluting him. On their inquiry, desirous of instructing the import of the aphorisms, he explained to them in twenty six verses (Kārikās) commencing thus:

नृत्तावसाने नटराजराजो .

At the close of his dance, Nāṭarāja (Śiva), the lord of dance, in order to uplift Sanaka and other siddhas (mystics) sounded the hand-drum fourteen times. I comment upon, the collection of these aphorisms of Śiva. (1)

The term 'I' is understood. By the term Naṭarājarāja, auspiciousness is indicated. On account of his expertise in manifesting the manifold nature of his Cosmic form, (He is) Naṭarājarāja; (He is) endowed with the dexterity in the dance - form called Tāṇḍava significant with the manifestation of vigour; the proficiency in other forms of dance is also present (in Him). In order to raise Sanaka and others by reminding them of the Supreme Nature of the Soul that is in Him, which is beyond the reach of senses like speech etc., under the pretext of sounding the hand-drum, he sounded it (the hand-drum) fourteen times at the close of the dance to manifest the Supreme consciousness that is inherent in Him. Pondering over, I shall clearly elaborate the auspicious, deep secret (mystical) first collection of lord Śiva's aphorisms, related to lord Śiva himself, which are the expansion in the form of letters of the sound that emanated (from the hand-drum). The word 'vimarśe' (I shall explain) is to be understood to have been used for the sake of metrical requirements.

The texts that follow Pāṇini are meant in this verse, starting with the term ‘atra’. It means “among the letters” (lipiṣu). The variant reading is antyam varṇa or *antyarvarṇa*¹². In both the cases it is Bahuvrīhi (Attributive) compound. Mixed is meaning of other words, having compounded endings. The variant reading is caturdaśa, i.e., fourteen. In that case, it is Tatpuruṣa (Determinative) compound. The application of caturdaśa (fourteen) is like that of dvyekayoḥ (in between two and one).¹³ (In some texts, the reading is 'antyam (antya) varṇa caturdaśakam')¹⁴. Dhātvartham means gaining proficiency in the science of words (grammar) which is based on roots (dhātus) ; this is based on the maxim that 'the sound is (caused) by the collection of end letters'. Thus it has been said by Indra¹⁵: "The roots are said to arise out of the end-letters".

SŪTRA - I: अ इ उ ण्

तत्राद्येन सूत्रेण सर्ववर्णानां समस्तभुवनानां च समुद्भवरूपं स्वात्मतत्त्वमुपदिष्टमित्याह अकार - इति । *tatrādyena sūtreṇa sarvavarṇānām samastabhuvanānām ca

samudbhavarūpam svātmatatvamupadiṣṭamityāha akāra - iti |*

Through the first aphorism, starting with the syllable 'a', signifying the inner principle which is the cause of the origin of all the worlds and all the letters, he (Nandikeśvara) says, akāra, etc.¹⁶

13 These are some special rules in Sanskrit grammar.

14 This means 'the fourteen last letters'.

15 Indra is the lord of heavens; but here it refers to the propounder of a school of grammar known as 'Aindra'.

16 The starting word of the third verse.

अकारो ब्रह्मरूपः स्यान्निरुणस्सर्ववस्तुषु ।

चित्कलाम् इं समाश्रित्य जगद्रूप ¹⁷उण् ईश्वरः ॥ ३ ॥ akāro brahmarūpaḥ syānnirguṇassarvavastuṣu ।

citkalām im sam āśritya jagadrūpa uḥ ēvaraḥ ॥ 3 ॥

The letter 'a' is the form of attributeless Brahman (God) dwelling in all objects. United with the letter 'i', which is consciousness (citkalā), the letter 'u' is the God (Īśvara) (of the form of) of the universe. (3)

अनेन अः परमेश्वरो निर्गुणः इं मायां आश्रित्य उः व्यापकः ¹⁸[क्वचित् सगुण इति पाठः] ण् आसीदिति सूचितस्सूत्रार्थः । सर्ववस्तुषु परापश्यन्तीमध्यमावैखर्यादिषु चित्कलामाश्रित्येत्यत्र गायत्री ¹⁹“तां पद्मिनीं ईम्” इतिवद् इकारो बोध्यः । तत्र सूत्रे इकारस्तु त्रिणेत्रेण नोदितः इकारेणैव ईकारः प्रकटितः ।

gāyatrīm “tām padmanemī”mitivadikāro bodhyaḥ । tatra sūtre ikārastu triṇetreṇa noditaḥ ikāreṇaiva ikāraḥ prakṛitaḥ ।

By this, the meaning of the aphorism (viz. a i u ṇ) is indicated thus : The attributeless God, (the letter) 'aḥ' is united (with the letter) 'i' which is the *māyā*²⁰ was (the letter) 'ṇ' all pervasive (the letter) 'uḥ'²¹. [In some texts, the variant reading is 'god with attributes' (saguna) in the place of 'all pervasive']. In all objects (that have) Parā, Paśyanti, Madhyamā and *Vaikhari*²²; (He) resorts to citkalā (denoted by) 'i' which is to be understood as 'ī' as in the case of *Gāyatrī*²³ or 'tām padminīm im'²⁴. In the aphorism, though the symbol for long vowel 'ī' is not mentioned by the three eyed one (viz. Śiva), it is to be understood that it (the long vowel) is indicated by the short vowel 'i'.

¹⁷ उरीश्वरः

¹⁸ अयं भागो व्याख्याबहिर्भूत इत्याभाति ।

¹⁹ तां पद्मिनी

अत्र प्रमाणम् - “असद्वा इदमग्र आसीत् । ततो वै सदजायत” इति श्रुतिः (तै.उप. 2.7.1) । असद् ब्रह्म वै निश्चयेन अग्रे सृष्टेः पूर्वं इदमकार-रूपाक्षरात्मकमासीत् । ततोऽक्षरादसतो वै सत्सगुणमजायत जातमिति तदर्थः । तदुक्तं गीतायां (10.33) - “अक्षराणामाकारोऽस्मि” इति ।

atra pramāṇam - “asadvā idamagra āsīt | tato vai sadajāyata” iti śrutiḥ | asad brahma vai niścayena agre sṛṣṭeḥ pūrvam idamakāra-rūpākṣarātmakamāsīt | tato'kṣarādasato vai satsaguṇamajāyata jātamiti tadarthaḥ | taduktam gītāyām - “akṣarāṇāmākāro'smi” iti |

20 According to Indian philosophy, especially the Advaita (non-dualism) school, māyā is the cause of the appearance of the world.

21 Each letter of the first aphorism viz. 'a i uḥ' is described in the commentary thus.

22 These are the four levels of articulations of sound in the human body.

23 The most powerful mantra in the Vedas; also name of Vedic metre, personified as a goddess.

24 This mantra appears in the Śrīsūkta (Hymn in praise of goddess Lakṣmī) of the Rgveda.

Here is the authority from the Vedas: "In the beginning there was only non-existence; the existence emerged therefrom". Certainly the ultimate God (Brahman) existed in the form of the syllable (non-perishable) 'a' before the creation (of the universe). From that imperishable non-existence ('a' - Brahman), the 'existence' (sat) with attributes was born. Hence it is said in the Bhagavadgītā: "Among all the alphabets, I am the syllable 'a'."

अत एवाह - अकार इति ।

अकारः सर्ववर्णाग्र्यः प्रकाशः परमेश्वरः ।

आद्यमन्त्येन संयोगात् अहमित्येव जायते ॥ ४ ॥ ata evāha - akāra iti ।

akāraḥ sarvavarṇāgryaḥ prakāśaḥ parameśvaraḥ ।

ādyamantyaena samyogāt ahamityeva jāyate ॥ 4 ॥

Therefore it is said - the syllable 'a'.

The syllable 'a', the first among all alphabets, is the effulgent God. From the conjunction of the first and last letters, the (word) 'aham'²⁵ itself is born. (4)

आदिरन्त्येन सहेतेत्यादिरकारः अन्त्यो हकारः । अकारादि

²⁵ The word 'aham' means 'I'. The first and last letters in Sanskrit alphabets are a and ha.

हकारान्तास्सर्वे वर्णा ततः परमात्मनः समभवन्नित्यर्थः । परमश्शिव इति पाठान्तरम् ।

*ādirantyena sahetetyādirakāraḥ antyo hakāraḥ | akārādi hakārāntāssarve varṇā tataḥ paramātmanah samabhavannityarthah |
paramaśśiva iti pāṭhāntaram |*

The first letter 'a' is united with the last letter 'ha'. All the letters from 'a' to 'ha' are born from the Supreme Being. The variant reading is 'Supreme Śiva' (in the place of Supreme Being).

सर्वं परात्मकं पूर्वं ज्ञप्तिमात्रमिदं जगत् ।

It (speech) is known as Vaikharī when it originates from the face called *Viśuddhi cakra*²⁸. By its origin and manifestation, it is similar to Madhyamā. (6)

It is only the lord, who from time immemorial, existing with the limiting adjunct as the jīva, being prompted by the activities due to karma, undergoes phenomenological changes as Parā in the navel region, Paśyantī in the heart region, Madhyamā in the Viśuddhi cakra (throat) and later Vaikharī in the mouth and thus assumes the form of Vedas (scriptures).

Here, at the time of the origin of the syllables (letters) only the five syllables a, i, u, r and ! are said to be the respective source of all the forty-nine syllables²⁹, five principal elements³⁰, and five respective groups (vargas)³¹. This (syllable) too is two-fold viz., long and short. The variant reading is "it has been said that the Madhyamā (form of speech) is the manifestation of consciousness".

SŪTRA - II: ऋ ल क्

ननु सर्ववेदान्तेषु परमेश्वर एक इति निश्चितत्वात् मायाम् इं चित्कलां समाश्रित्य जगद्रूपोऽभूदित्युक्ते अद्वैतहानिः स्यादित्याशङ्कायामाह - ऋलगिति ।

If a doubt is raised that there would be defect in the concept of non-dualism, when (we) accept that the great lord (Parameśvara) who is described as the only one in Vedānta appeared as one word by depending on the (letter) i, the citkalā it is answered 'ṛ ! k'.

The lord denoted by 'ṛ ! k' showed māyā in the form of mental tendencies. By resorting to the same form, he gave birth to the form of the world. (10)

The lord whose nature is pure consciousness 'ṛ ! k' created (the world) by resorting to his consort māyā, the expanded form (universe) comprising of animate and inanimate beings. This is a variant reading.

In the first reading (version given above), the lord (denoted by) 'r', the mental function designated as māyā, (denoted by) 'l', showed (denoted by) 'k'³⁵. By resorting only to her (māyā), he created the world at his will.

In another version He created this universe of animate and inanimate beings, by resorting to mental functions. The Vedic passage, “the Supreme Being is of black and red colour denoting ṛta and satya (truth)” is the testimony for (the letter) r denoting the lord. It means, (word) ṛta denotes that Supreme Brahman, which is real. Another Vedic passage also says, “He desired, ‘let me multiply into many beings’”.

35 The translation has been made adhering to the sequence of the letters in the aphorism r l k. It means: The Lord revealed māyā in the form of mental mood (vṛtti).

In the Śrītantra (it is said): “And the great lord, (denoted by) l was my mind-form”. The other reading is ‘my modification is the mind-form’. It is just like (the syllables) r and l becoming identical.³⁶

The other reading is 'vāgartha sundarī' (the word 'sundari' (beautiful damsel) and its meaning).

If it is said that ‘He created’, then there will be the aspects of the creator and the created; this will lead to the defect in the concept of non-dualism. Then, it is answered “having created that, he entered into that very thing. Having entered it. . .” It is said, resorting to the Vedic passage (quoted above) that “e oṅ” symbolises the unity of māyā and Īśvara. There is no conflict in the concept of non-dualism, since it is the transformation of one’s own (Self) in the form of created and the creator.

As the identity between the saguṇa (determinate Absolute) and nirguṇa (indeterminate Absolute) is indicated through the syllable, Om, the Praṇava, arising out of (the syllables) a and u, the sublation of duality is suggested through that analogy, which indicates the identity everywhere. This aphorism brings out the relationship between the first and second syllable and the third with the second syllable through the different ways of aggregate and individual.

He is (the syllable) u, the consciousness who is (the syllable) a the imperishable and i characterised by māyā. On account of the identity of all objects, the non-duality is ascertained; not the manifold nature, and relationship of creator and created. It means that having entered into that (object), it appears in that form. As said earlier, on the basis of the banyan tree-seed maxim⁴² the set of five syllables discussed in the previous two aphorisms is the cause of the entire universe. The syllables of the succeeding aphorisms also originate from this, mentioning the uniform relationship between the previous syllables with the succeeding ones in the manner of aggregate and individual. The idea of unity is pointed by the nature of being one. Even here the non-difference is admitted in all the Vedas.

42 Just as a huge tree is hidden in the tiny seed in an unmanifested form, the group of five syllables mentioned here, is (said to be the) cause of the entire universe.

45 The four great statements are well-known in Vedānta.

“The object indicated by the term Brahman, is said to be the consciousness. Since Brahman is the consciousness,⁴⁶ indeed “I am Brahman”.⁴⁷

“That Brahman being the witness of everything, it is conceptually ‘Thou art That’⁴⁸. Indeed to avoid mentioning any other, it is said by Atharvan, ‘This Self is Brahman’.”⁴⁹

The syllable ai endowed with the primal energy, in order to expand the universe, which is Himself, manifested Himself. Hence the syllable ai is formed by the conjunction of the letters a and i in their elongated form, mentioned in the previous aphorism. That God, who is pure consciousness, is the syllable au, which is formed by the conjunction of long a (ā) and long u (ū) mentioned in the previous aphorism. That

It is also said in the Śvaravimarśinī – “The conjunction of the syllable ū and knowledge is said to denote all the creation.” It means that He is engaged in expanding the universe through desire. Here, it is said in Jñānottama : “The world pervaded by Praṇava (Om), is rooted in māyā.” In this way the collection of principles from Śiva upto Prakṛti (Primordial cause of the universe) emerged from the thirteen syllables⁵³. The discriminative knowledge of Prakṛti and Puruṣa would be described later⁵⁴. It is read as concluding remarks in this aphorism. Here through the distinction of short and long, only fourteen aphorisms are described; this firmly symbolises fourteen worlds,⁵⁵ fourteen cakras (wheels) and fourteen enclosures.

It is said in the dialogue between Śiva and Gaurī in the Mahāmantratattvaparakāśinī :

“O goddess, you are indeed my form which is the principal sacred syllable (mantra). The wheel (cakra) consisting of fourteen is said to be yours.

“O Ambika, the fourth one (turya) consisting of thirteen syllables is our mantra. In an expanded form, it is of the nature of bindu, from which all the syllables originate.

“The emergence of the syllables is due to the explosion of the bindu. From it originated the principal elements such as space, etc.

“It is (said) that the bindu is the transcendental form of Śrīcakrarāja (the king among the mystic yantras). Later emerged the fourteen (syllables) in the form of cakra .

“The worlds created here are (said to be) fourteen.”

SŪTRA - V : ह य व र ट्

ततः आत्मनस्सकाशादाकाशादिभूतसंभवमाह - भूतेति ।

tataḥ ātmanassakāśādākāśādibhūtasambhavamāha - bhūteteti ।

Then, the creation of elements such as space etc., from the Self is described, through the verse starting with the word bhūta.

भूतपञ्चकमेतस्मात् हयवरण् महेश्वरात् ।

व्योमवाय्वम्बुवह्वाख्यभूतान्यासीत्स एव हि ॥ १५ ॥ bhūtapañcakametasmāt hayavarāṇ mahēśvarāt ।

vyomavāyvamvubahnyākhyabhūtānyāsitsa eva hi ॥15॥

From ha, ya, va, ra and ṭ Maheśvara, the five principal elements called space, air, water, fire etc., originated. He is verily these elements. (15)

स एव परमेश्वर एव ।

sa eva parameśvara eva ।

‘He’, verily denotes the Parameśvara here.

हकाराद् व्योमसंज्ञश्च यकाराद् वायुरुच्यते ।

रकाराद्वाहि [रेफाद्वाहिश्च]स्तोयं तु वकारादिति शैवराट् ॥१६॥ hakārād vyomasamjñāśca yakārād vāyurucyate ।

rakārādvahni [rephādvahniśca] stoyam tu vakārāditi

śaivarāṭ ॥16॥

According to the Śaiva parlance, Ether is symbolized through the syllable 'ha', Air through the syllable 'ya', Fire through the syllable 'ra' and water through the syllable 'va'. (16)

हकारादिति । “तस्माद्वा एतस्मादात्मन आकाशस्संभूतः । आकाशाद्वायुः । वायोराग्निः । अग्नेरापः । अद्भ्यः पृथिवी ।” इति श्रुतेः (तै.उप. 2.1.1) । एतस्मात्परमेश्वरात् भूतपञ्चकमाकाशादिकं प्रपञ्चकारणमासीत् ।

hakārāditi । “tasmādvā etasmādātmana ākāśassambhūtaḥ । ākāśādvāyuh । vāyorāgniḥ । agnerāpaḥ । adbhyaḥ pṛthivī ।” iti śruteḥ । etasmātparameśvarāt bhūtapañcakamākāśādikam prapañca-kāraṇamāsīt ।

Through the syllable 'ha' etc. The Upaniṣad also says, “From this Ātman (Self), is born the Ether, from Ether the Air; from Air the Fire; from Fire the Waters; from Waters the Earth”. The collection of five principal elements (such as) Ether, etc., (which are) the cause of the world is born of Parameśvara.

SŪTRA - VI: ल ण्

अत्रास्मिन् सूत्रे भूतपञ्चकमासीदित्युक्तम् । तत्राकाशादि- samastakāraṇamiti sūtrāntareṇāvocat - ādhāreti |*

Here in this aphorism it is said, "the collection of five principal elements was there". There, only the four elements starting with Ether are mentioned; if it is doubted that the Earth is not mentioned, it had been explained through another aphorism starting with the word 'ādhāra', that the Earth in the form of a basis, is the cause for everything.

आधारभूतं भूतानामन्नादीनाम् च कारणम् ।

अन्नाद्रेतस्ततो जीवः कारणत्वात् लण् ईरितम् ॥१७॥

ādhārabhūtam bhūtānāmannādīnām ca kāraṇam |

annādretastato jīvaḥ kāraṇatvāt laṇ īritam || 17 ||

Being the basis of all elements, (it is) also the cause of matter; from the matter the semen, from it the individual Self. Due to its nature of being the cause, it is said, 'laṇ'. (17)

भूतानां प्राणिजातानां उद्भिज्ज-स्वेदज-जरायुजाण्डजादीनां प्रधानकारणत्वात् आधारभूतं पृथिवी पुनश्चान्नपानादीनां कारणम् । ‘अन्नद्रेत’ इति न्यायात् एतेषां कारणत्वात् प्रत्येकत्वेन लणित्युदीरितमित्यर्थः ।

The Earth is the basis and primal cause of all the creatures viz., plants, (coming out of earth), insects (born out of sweat/friction), those coming out of womb and those born out of egg and also the cause for food (solid) and water (liquid) etc. According to the statement, ‘the semen is from the food’ , and also being the cause for all these, it is said that ‘laṇ’ denotes (all) individually.

SŪTRA - VII : अ म ङ ण न म्

ततः पृथिव्यादीनां कारणत्वेन स्थितानां तन्मात्राणामुत्पत्तिक्रममाह - शब्दस्पर्शविति ।

tataḥ pṛthivyādīnām kāraṇatvena sthitānām tanmātrāṇām utpattikramamāha – śabdasparsāviti ।

Then the sequence in the creation of subtle elements (tanmātras) of Earth etc., which exist as the cause of the universe, is stated (through the verse) as śabda and sparśa.

शब्दस्पर्शौ रूपरसगन्धाश्च जमङ्गणनम् ।

व्योमादीनां गुणा ह्येते जानीयात् सर्ववस्तुषु ॥ १८ ॥

śabdasparśau rūparasagandhāśca nāmaṇaṇanam ।

“Sound, touch, form, taste, and smell are the nāma ṇa ṇa nam; one should know these (as) the qualities of the elements Ether, etc., in all objects . (18)

One should know these as the individual cause and quality of the (respective) elements such as Ether, etc., in all objects. [Here in some texts (it is said) the thirty six syllables beginning with 'a' and ending with 'kṣa' represent the thirty six principles and in the texts such as Tantrarāja, few (of them) are grouped in five letters sequentially as per the order and method of bhūta lipi. Thus the differences in determining the cause are many in other places. Here it has been revealed as per the statements in the Tantra texts]. According to the statement, the last letter in the five vargas (groups) are the qualities sound, touch, etc., of the elements Ether etc., in the cosmic person, the embodiment of the syllables and who is the cause of all worlds.

SŪTRA - VIII, IX: झ भ ज् । घ ढ ध ष्

ततः सूत्राभ्यां कर्मेन्द्रियवर्गमुद्धाटयति - वाक्पाणीति ।

tataḥ sūtrābhyāṃ karmendriyavargamudghāṭayati - vākpaṇīti ।

Then through two (succeeding) aphorisms is stated, the group of motor organs beginning with vāk, pāṇī .

वाक्पाणी च झभञ्जासीद्विराड्रूपं चिदात्मनः ।

सर्वजन्तुषु विज्ञेयं स्थावरादौ न विद्यते ॥ १९ ॥

वर्गाणां तुर्यवर्णा ये कर्मेन्द्रिय ⁶⁰गणा हि ते । घढधष् सर्वभूतानां पादपायू उपस्थकः ॥ २० ॥ vākpāṇī ca jhabhaññāsīdvirāḍrūpam cidātmanah । sarvajantuṣu vijñeyam sthāvarāḍau na vidyate ॥19॥ vargāṇām turyavarṇā ye karmendriya gaṇā hi te । ghaḍhadhaṣ sarvabhūtānām pādapāyū upasthakaḥ॥20॥

Jhabhajñ is the speech and hands of the virāt form (cosmic form), the Self, of the nature of consciousness; it is to be known as existing in all beings except the plants, etc. (19)

Those syllables which are the fourth in the (respective) groups are the motor organs. Gha ḍha dhaṣ are the feet, anus and the generative organ of all creatures. (20)

परमात्मन इति पाठान्तरम् । वाक्पाणीति । चिद्रूपस्य शिवस्य प्राणिजातस्य च झकारभकारौ स्थावरादिषु विना विराड्रूपं विज्ञेयमित्यर्थः । अथ क्रमप्राप्तं पादादिकमाह - घढधषिति । परमार्थतः परमशिवसकाशात् इमे कर्मेन्द्रियगणाः सर्वजन्तूनां पादपायूपस्था घढधवर्णाः जाता इत्यर्थः । paramātmāna iti pāṭhāntaram ; vākpāṇīti । cidrūpasya śivasya prāṇijātasya ca jhakārabhakārau sthāvarādiṣu vinā virāḍrūpam paramārthataḥ paramaśivasakāśāt ime karmendriyagaṇāḥ sarvajantūnām

pādapāyūpasthā ghaḍhadha-varṇāḥ jātā ityarthaḥ |*

The variant reading is paramātmanah in the place of cidātmanah. Speech and hands etc. – The (syllables) jha and bha are to be known as the cosmic form (vīrāḍrūpa) of Śiva, the consciousness embodied, manifest in all the beings except in the plants etc. Then (the author) explains in sequence the foot etc. (as) gha ḍha dha. These motor organs – feet, anus and the generative organ of all beings represented by the syllables gha ḍha dha are in fact born of lord Śiva.

SŪTRA - X : ज ब ग ड द श्

क्रमप्राप्तं ज्ञानेन्द्रियसम्भवमाह - श्रोत्रेति ।

kramaprāptam jñānendriyasambhavamāha - śrotreti |

In sequence, the origin of the sense organs is stated as 'śrotra' etc.

श्रोत्रत्वङ्नयनं ⁶¹घ्राणजिह्वादीन्द्रियपञ्चकम् ।

सर्वेषामपि जन्तूनामीरितं जबगडदश् ॥ २१ ॥

śrotrātvañnayanana prāṇajihvādīndriyapañcakam |

sarveṣāmapi jantūnāmīritam jabagaḍadaś || 21 ||

Ja ba ga ḍa daś (is) said to be the five sense organs – (such as) ears, skin, eyes, nose and tongue – of all the beings. (21)

“वर्गाणां मध्यवर्णोत्थोज्ञानेन्द्रियगणः स्मृतः” इति वचनशासनात् जबगडदवर्णसम्भवो ज्ञानेन्द्रियगणः इति सर्वत्र सर्वेषां प्राणिजातानामेते वर्णाः ज्ञानेन्द्रियाणां जनका इति वा विज्ञेयमित्यर्थः ।

As it is enjoined through the statement that “the group of sense organs is born of the middle syllables of the vargas”, it is empirical that the set of sense organs is produced by the syllables ja ba ga ḍa daś ; it is to be noted that these syllables are the originators of the sense organs of all.

SŪTRA - XI: ख फ छ ठ थ च ट त व्

ततः प्राणादिपञ्चकमनोबुद्धयहङ्काराः समुन्मील्यन्ते - प्राणादीति ।

tataḥ prāṇādipañcakamanobuddhyahaṅkāraḥ samunmīlyante - prāṇādīti ।

Then the evolution of the five airs, mind, intellect and ego (is explained) through (the term) prāṇa, etc.

प्राणादि पञ्चकं चैव मनो बुद्धिरहङ्कृतिः ।

बभूव करणत्वेन खफछठथचटतव् ॥ २२ ॥ prāṇādi pañcakam caiva mano buddhirahaṅkṛtiḥ ।

babhūva karaṇatvena khaphachathathacaṭataḥ ॥ 22 ॥

Kha, pha, cha, ṭha, tha ca ṭa, taḥ became instrumental in the evolution of the collection of five airs (prāṇa etc.,) and mind, intellect and ego. (22)

एतैरष्टवर्णैः प्राणादयः पञ्च मनोबुद्धयहङ्कृतयश्च जगतां करणत्वेन संभूता इत्यर्थः । etairasṭavarṇaiḥ prāṇādayaḥ pañca manobuddhya-haṅkṛtayaśca jagatām karaṇatvena sambhūtā ityarthah ।

Through these eight syllables, the five airs prāṇa etc., mind, intellect and ego evolved as instrument of the world.

वर्गद्वितीयवर्णोत्थाः प्राणाद्याः पञ्च वायवः ।

मध्यवर्गत्रयाज्जाता अन्तःकरणवृत्तयः ॥ २३ ॥

vargadvitīyavarṇotthāḥ prāṇādyāḥ pañca vāyavaḥ ।

madhyavargatrayaḥ jātā antaḥkaraṇavṛttayaḥ ॥ 23 ॥

The five airs beginning with prāṇa arise out of the second syllables in each group and the modes of internal organ are both through the first syllables of the three interim groups (such as ca, ṭa and ta). (23)

SŪTRA - XII: क प य्

स्पष्टम् । अन्यद्वयसमुद्भूतौ पुरुषः प्रकृतिर्गुणाः । प्रकृतिर्गुहेति पाठान्तरम् ।

spaṣṭam | anyaddvayasamudbhūtau puruṣaḥ prakṛtirguṇāḥ |
prakṛtirguheti pāṭhāntaram |

It is clear. Puruṣa and Prakṛti are manifested through the other two syllables ka and pa. The variant reading is – prakṛtiḥ guha.

प्रकृतिं पुरुषं चैव सर्वेषामेव सम्मतम् ।

संभूतमिति विज्ञेयं कपाभ्यामिति निश्चितम् ॥ २४ ॥

prakṛtim puruṣam caiva sarveṣāmeva sammatam |
sambhūtamiti vijñeyam kapābhyāmiti niścitam ||24||

It is to be known that the view asserting the Prakṛti and Puruṣa as born of ka and pa is accepted by all. (24)

अयं श्लोकः पाठान्तरम् ।

ayam ślokaḥ pāṭhāntaram |

This verse is a variation.

ततः सर्वप्राणिकारणत्वेनाद्यन्तवर्गद्वयाक्षरग्रहणत्वेन संपुटीभावं प्रकृतिपुरुषाभ्यां प्रकाशयति प्रकृतिमिति । ककारपकारजातौ प्रकृति- tataḥ sarvaprāṇikāraṇatvenādyantavargadvayākṣaragrahaṇatvena samputībhāvam prakṛti-puruṣābhyām prakāśayati prakṛtimiti । kakārapakārajātau prakṛtipuruṣāvityarthaḥ ।

Then by adopting the first letter of the first group (namely 'ka'), and the first letter of the last group (namely 'pa') which are the cause of all beings, the togetherness of the Prakṛti and Puruṣa is revealed as Prakṛti etc. It means that the Prakṛti and Puruṣa arose out of the syllables ka and pa.

SŪTRA - XIII : श ष स र्

ततोऽवस्थात्रयं निरूपयति - सत्त्वमिति । tato'vasthātrayam nirūpayati - sattvamiti ।

Then the three states are elucidated as Sattva etc.

सत्त्वंरजस्तम इति गुणानां त्रितयं पुरा ।

समाश्रित्य महादेवः शषसर्क्रीडति प्रभुः ॥ २५ ॥ sattvamrajastama iti guṇānām tritayam purā ।

samāśritya mahādevaḥ śaśasar krīḍati prabhuḥ ॥ 25 ॥

Having resorted long ago, to the three qualities – Sattva, Rajas and Tamas which evolved from śa, ṣa and sar, Lord Mahādeva plays. (25)

पुरा सृष्टेः प्राक् शषसवर्णसंभूतान् सत्त्वरजस्तमोगुणान् आश्रित्य परमशिवः सर्वभूतेषु क्रीडतीत्यर्थः ।

purā sṛṣṭeḥ prāk śaśasavarṇasambhūtān sattvarajastamoguṇān āśṛitya paramaśivaḥ sarvabhūteṣu krīḍatītyarthaḥ ।

It means, that long ago before creation, having resorted to the qualities Sattva, Rajas and Tamas born of the syllables śa, ṣa sar, Paramaśiva continues His play in all beings.

शकाराद्रजसो भूतिः षकारात्तमसो भवः । śakārādrajaso bhūtiḥ śakārāttamaso bhavaḥ ।

sakārātsattvasambhūtiriti triguṇasambhavaḥ ॥ 26 ॥

The evolution of the three qualities is thus : Rajas arises from (syllable) śa; Tamas is born of ṣa and Sattva is born of sa. (26)

SŪTRA - XIV : ह ल्

स्पष्टम् । सर्वतत्त्वजनकः स्वयं तत्त्वातीत इति ज्ञापनार्थमेतत्सूत्रं चकारेत्याह तत्त्वातीत इति ।

*spāṣṭam | sarvatattvajanakāḥ svayam tattvātīta iti
jñāpanārtha-metatsūtram cakāretyāha tattvātīta iti |*

It is clear. To emphasise the fact that being the originator of all the principles (tattvas), He is beyond them. He has composed this aphorism (which is explained) through Tattvātīta, etc.

तत्त्वातीतः परः साक्षी सर्वानुग्रहविग्रहः ।

The lord Śambhu disappeared stating—“transcending the principles, I am the Supreme,
Witness, embodiment of Grace, the Supreme Soul (represented by) the term ‘hal’.” (27)

इति नन्दिकेशकाशिका समाप्ता ।

Here ends the Nandikeśa Kāśikā.

Imparting the supreme knowledge to all that, He is the embodiment of abundant Grace, the Witness, the one who has transcended the principles and is hal (the lord), under the pretext of the sound of the drum, He disappeared.

“ हकारः शिववर्णः स्यादिति शैवागमस्मृतिः । ”

“ hakāraḥ śivavarṇaḥ syāditi śaivāgamasmr̥tiḥ । ”

The texts on Śaivāgama describe ‘ha’ as the syllable of Śiva.

Thus ends the (commentary) Tattvavimarśinī written by Śrī Upamanyu on the Ādisūtra Nandikeśa Kāśikā.
